World Council Of Synagogues Is First Such Traditional Religious Body In Jewish History

A World Council of Synagogues was formally constituted at Kiamesha Lake, N. Y., by representatives of Judaism in twenty-two countries.

The new religious body brings together for the first time Conservative Jews in the United States and in other nations.

It was created by the unanimous vote of more than 1,300 delegates attending the biennial convention of the United Synagogue of America and more than seventy accredited delegates from overseas, says the New York Times. The United Synagogue is the congregational arm of the Convative movement in the U.S. and Canada. It speaks for about 1,000,000 synagogue-goers.

In addition, 2,000,000 other Jews are equally divided between the Orthodox and the Reform branches of American Judaism. The Reform movement organized a World Union of Progressive Judaism several years ago. There is no comparable body in Orthodoxy.

In addition to the United States, the following countries will be represented on the new Council: Argentina, Australia, Bolivia, Brazil, Canada, Chile, Colombia, Britain, France, Germany, India, Israel, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Mexico, Panama, the Philippine Islands, Surinam, Sweden, and Switzerland.

A spokesman described the World Council as the "first organization representing Jewish communities, from so many nations, to be established under traditional religious auspices in the whole 5,000-year span of Jewish history."

Its constitution as adopted describes its purposes as follows: "To foster the Jewish tradition in its historic continuity. "To advocate the centrality and pre-eminence of the synagogue in the life of the Jewish people. "To further the study of the Hebrew language as the repository of our sacred literature and our accumulated spiritual and cultural heritage, and as the most potent cultural bond among the Jews throughout the world. "To relate the ideals and practices of Judaism to contemporary life and thought to the end that mankind's spiritual and technical aspirations may be enhanced and God's kingdom may be established on this earth."

In commenting on the establishment of the Council, Charles Rosengarten, provisional committee chairman, said: "In the past there have been international associations of Jews for relief and support of beleaguered brethren in other lands, for mutual defense from assaults on civil and religious liberties and for a variety of political purposes. But this is the first organization I know of brought together for religious purposes." Mr. Rosengarten was elected president of the Council.

Among the member bodies is a little-known 2,000-year-old Jewish community in India called Bene Israel, says the New York Times. It was represented by Baruch B. Benjamin, until recently Under Secretary of Commerce and Industry in the Indian Government.

According to Mr. Benjamin, Judaism in India consists mostly of Bene Israels. Their ancestors, as is indicated by oral tradition, migrated to India from Palestine after the destruction of the first temple, about 2,000 years ago.

While preserving the Jewish mode of life, the Bene Israels constitute an unusual group of the Jewish people. They have a characteristic culture, which includes folklore, customs and hymnology, and legends of miracles. All three major branches of Judaism have a considerable common core of beliefs and practices. Conservatism, however, maintains the principle of the authority of Jewish law while recognizing that growth and development are an essential element of its nature.

Reform Judaism emphasizes the evolving character of Judaism and a continuing interpretation of religious law. The Orthodox branch holds to the binding authority of Jewish religious law and insists on its immutable character.

The United Synagogue of America, the organization of Conservative congregations in the United States and Canada, called upon the United States and the other atomic powers to "dismantle all weapons of mass destruction," to renounce the use of atomic arms, and to continue indefinitely the ban on nuclear testing. The action was unanimous.

The convention also opposed race or religion "as a test of fitness and availability for public office," and urged both parties to declare themselves publicly as opposed to appeals to racial, religious, or ethnic prejudice.

The biennial convention gave its Solomon Schechter Award for social action to Temple Emanuel, of Staten Island, N. Y., for its participation with Catholic and Protestant clergy in the rehabilitation of juvenile delinquents through a combined program of work placement and religious counseling. The program is an activity of the Richmond County Kiwanis Club, whose chairman, Frank A. Capell, founded the plan and who was present to see the award given to Rabbi Frank Wikansky, leader of the Temple.

The convention went on record for changes in the U.S. McCarran — Walter immigration law, says the New York Herald Tribune. It demanded elimination of the "dis-

Was Head Of U.S. Mining Dynasty, Ex-Envoy To Portugal

Col. M. Robert Guggenheim, former U.S. Ambassador to Portugal, died at the age of 74. He was stricken while entering a taxicab after having dined with a friend in the Georgetown section of Washington and was pronounced dead on arrival at George Washington University Hospital.

Colonel Guggenheim was an heir to the fortune amassed by his grandfather in Colorado copper mines. He was born in New York and graduated in 1907 from the Columbia University School of Mines, says the New York Times. In World War I he served as a major in the Army. He was graduated from the Army War College in 1925 and was on the War Department staff from 1932 to 1935, holding the rank of colonel in the Reserve.

President Eisenhower appointed Colonel Guggenheim Ambassador to Portugal in 1953. He retired the next year. Colonel Guggenheim was a director of the Daniel and Florence Guggenheim Foundation, named for his parents. The organization sponsors the

Seeks Interfaith Study House For Scholars

A study center where Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish scholars might engage in "dialogue" on theological questions was proposed by Dr. Jaroslav Pelikan.

Dr. Pelikan, who is on the staff of the Divinity School of the University of Chicago, is a Lutheran theologian and writer. He made his proposal at a luncheon meeting of regional directors of the National Conference of Christians and Jews in the Biltmore Hotel, in New York.

The speaker suggested that the study center be established under neutral auspices like the national conference and have access to the resources of such institutions as the Jewish Theological Seminary, Fordham University, and Union Theological Seminary, says the New York Times. All three schools are in New York.

Later, Dr. Lewis Webster Jones, president of the conference, said that the proposal was an "inspired and enlightening idea." He added that his organization would give it serious consideration.

In his address Dr. Pelikan asserted that the time had arrived for interfaith relations to move

Zionist Leader Asks U.J.A. To Adopt 5-Year Plan

Dr. Nahum Goldmann, chairman of the Jewish Agency, said in Israel that he did not doubt that large numbers of Jewish emigrants from Eastern Europe would begin to reach Israel "in the foreseeable future." The leaders of Iron Curtain countries "know that Israel is the only solution for their Jewish populations," the Zionist leader told the sixth annual United Jewish Appeal study mission at Herzliya, says the New York Herald Tribune. This statement, he said, was based on "more than guesswork."

Dr. Goldmann said Israel's current financial situation is sound, its borders quiet, and the danger of war not acute. However, fundamental problems remain unsolved, he said, declaring that Arab-Israel peace is far off and that Israel has not yet achieved economic independence.

Israel's "breathing spell" crisis, he told the American Jewish group, must be used to consolidate its economy, clean up immigrant slums, complete the integration of immigrants of recent years and begin "real planning." The Zionist leader urged the U.J.A. to adopt

Israeli Envoy To U. S. Says Arabs Stir Up Strife

Tension still runs high in the Middle East thanks to the Arab states' "intrigue, subversion, and aggressive intent," Jacob D. Herzog, Minister of the Israeli Embassy in Washington, told more than 1,000 guests at the twenty-first annual luncheon of the Jewish Teachers Community Chest in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in New York, says the New York Herald Tribune. He said that recent relaxation of tensions among the great powers had not affected the turbulent Middle East.

"There are dangerous undercurrents in the area which might at any time come to the surface," he said. "Not only the relentless Arab attitude to Israel, but the intra-Arab relationship itself seem totally removed from the context of general international trends."

Mr. Herzog noted as a hopeful sign that since Israel's 1956 war with Egypt, several Arab states have shown "a more solemn resistance to the ambitions" of Col. Abdel Gamal Nasser, president of the United Arab Republic. The moderate attitude of these states may indicate that "although their criminatory national origins quota system, removal of the deportation features of the law, establishment of a firm appeals procedure, and elimination of inequities against naturalized citizens."

WORLD COUNCIL OF SYNAGOGUES

A resolution viewed "with dismay and concern" the continued condonation by the United States of discriminatory Arab measures against Americans who are Jews.

It urged a halt in the practice of screening American military and diplomatic personnel according to religion before assignment to Arab states, and asked the State Department to stop accepting the refusal of Arab countries to honor American passports carried by Jews, and to halt sanction of exclusion of Jews from employment in the Middle East by American firms.

The United Synagogue also asked the United States not to bow to the Arabs' blacklist of firms dealing with Israel, citing the example of Holland, Switzerland, and West Germany which "have denounced and refused to acquiesce in or condone the Arab boycott."

An unexpected controversy erupted at the biennial convention of the United Synagogue of America, at Kiamesha Lake N.Y. The issue was whether the body should affiliate with the World Zionist Organization.

The United Synagogue, with 1,000,000 members represents the Conservative branch of American Judaism. The Zionist organization was established in 1898 as the spearhead of a movement to establish a Jewish state, says the New York Times. Since the creation of Israel eleven years ago, it has devoted itself largely to education and problems confronting the state's new citizens.

The argument centered on the wisdom of a religious group's joining with what many delegates considered a "political" body. The issue arose at a session set aside for speeches on the role of the World Council of Synagogues which was formally constituted the day before.

Dr. Abraham J. Heschel, Professor of Jewish Ethics and Mysticism at the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York, said he would be unhappy to see the Roman Catholic Church join the Democratic party, or the National Council of Churches (Protestant and Eastern Orthodox) join the Republican or Democratic parties.

When Dr. Heschel had finished, Dr. Mordecai M. Kaplan, Professor of Philosophies of Religion at the Seminary demanded the floor for rebuttal. He denied that the World Zionist Organization was a political party in any sense, and expressed "amazement" at Dr. Heschel's views.

He said the United Synagogue should have a voice in Zionist activities because "collective instruments are needed to reach individuals." He appealed to the convention to affiliate with the Zionist body.

Rabbi Usher Kirshblum, administrative vice president of the Z.O.A., declared that Judaism and Zionism were synonymous, and "you cannot have one without the other." He warned, however, that the time was not propitious for the United Synagogue to take a seat in the Zionist body.

This warning was echoed by several other delegates, including Dr. Miriam Freund, president of Hadassah, the women's Zionist group. The controversy arose partly from the presentation of papers on "the future of Zionism and its role in Judaism." Dr. Simon Greenberg, vice chancellor of the Seminary, said that although Conservatives were committed to the ideals of Zionism they should not affiliate with the world body.

However, Dr. Nahum Goldmann, president of the Zionist Organization, called it an "empty excuse" that a religious organization could not join world Zionism because it was considered a political movement, says the New York Times. He said Zionism had been a political movement when it sought the establishment of a Jewish state, but had since taken on additional tasks affecting Judaism over the world.

from "conference to confrontation."

But, he said, "before there can be any real confrontation of Christianity by Judaism or Protestantism or Roman Catholicism, we must bring our attitudes toward one another from sufferance to politeness, and from politeness to the beginnings of justice."

Dr. Pelikan is the author of "The Riddle of Roman Catholicism," published recently by Abingdon Press. The volume received warm praise from Catholic critics.

Hailing the work of the National Conference, Dr. Pelikan told the directors that "your program cannot rest until no one is kept out of an apartment house, or, for that matter, out of the White House because of where or how he says his prayers."

The "avenue" of confrontation and communication, he said, "ought to be a two-way street; for it is finally impossible to make sense of either Judaism or Roman Catholicism as we know them without reference to the major movements that have broken off from them, and, in so doing, have changed them."

"Christianity needs confrontation with Judaism," Dr. Pelikan said, reports the New York Times. "By this I do not mean only the profound moral truth that the treatment of Jews is one of the tests of Christianity, and a test in which the Christian performance has been poor.

"I mean also the profound religious and theological truth that whenever Christian thought loses touch with Judaism, it loses touch with a part of itself."

"Protestant history likewise shows that Protestantism cannot understand itself without confrontation with Roman Catholicism," he said. "It is only through my own continuing confrontation with Roman Catholic life and thought that I am able to understand many of Luther's ideas.

"This is true both negatively and positively; negatively, because Luther formulated many of his ideas in opposition to one or another trend in Roman Catholicism; positively, because despite his estrangement from Rome he retained huge chunks of Catholic piety and doctrine in his outlook."

ISRAELI ENVOY

hatred has not abated, one has the impression that Israel is no longer the central issue," Mr. Herzog said. Israel's task in the face of possible Arab aggression, he said, is to create an impression of "growing stability and peaceful intent."

Lament For Arazi, The Hero Almost Unknown And Forgotten At Death

It is sad to have to record the death of one of the real architects of the establishment of Israel. After a long illness, Yehuda Arazi has died in Tel Aviv at the early age of fifty-two years, almost unknown and forgotten by the people for whom he did so much. For Arazi could be taken almost as the symbol of the period of struggle which receives far too little attention these days.

He was a fighter when there were no weapons with which to fight; he was a commander when there were no troops to command. But he fought with weapons which he managed to get, and he raised an army that defied an empire. For Arazi was — if ever there was one — an "impossibilist." Nothing was impossible when it meant serving the cause to which he had dedicated himself

He was 17 when he came with his parents and family from Lodz to Palestine. He was 19 when, on instructions from Hagana, he joined the Palestine Police, and he was 22 when he became an officer in the Mandatory Police Force. He was almost thirty when the Hagana sent him on his first big mission to Poland to purchase arms and get them through the severe British checks to the Hagana in Palestine.

Arazi stayed on in Poland until the war broke out three years later, and it was his weapons that were the backbone of the Hagana in the first stages of the war of 1498. How they got to Palestine, inside the most impossible objects, is one of the greatest mystery stories of real life ever attempted. Arazi was appointed head of the Hagana Intelligence when he got back to Palestine and soon reached an understanding with the British.

It was typical of him that the most dangerous operation that had now to be undertaken was reserved for himself; he set out to organise the sabotage of the Nazi-controlled oil fields at Ploesti in Rumania, and of other important targets in Nazi-occupied Europe. But he never forgot his principal objective, whether he was a policeman or an intelligence agent. Wherever and whenever he could, he acquired arms and established secret caches for the Hagana.

In 1943, the Mandatory authorities discovered what he was doing and he was tried and sentenced to imprisonment; but he had again eluded the authorities. Now began Arazi's most remarkable exploits. In 1945 he arrived — semi-legally — in British-controlled Italy to take charge of illegal immigration.

He was not satisfied with the limitations of night embarkations on lonely shores, and decided to sail his ships openly from the Port of Spezia with Italian connivance and in the face of British opposition. When he was challenged, there came the dramatic interlude of the Spezia hunger-strike, the challenge to world opinion — and victory.

Thousands reached Israel thanks to Arazi and thousands more were able to fight for Israel thanks to the arms which he had brought and kept safe for just this day. He had faith and he had courage, and he never lacked imagination. He was a great leader, but he was also a lone wolf.

It was the tragedy of Arazi — and of Israel — that his great talents and courage could not be used by the State as they deserved to be. Arazi was an "impossibilist" who proved his case. His last years of illness and difficulty might have been eased had those for whom he had done so much taken the opportunity to repay something of the debt.

But then it was typical of Yehuda Arazi that he would not ask for anything that was not freely given — or that he could not take himself. It is the tragedy of the revolutionists who are overtaken by the revolution; but it is questionable whether Israel can really afford to do without Arazi and his generation who did so much for her.

be great not only in their respective fields, but great in Jewish scholarship as well. With such an educational background these people will not only be making a contribution to the world at large but to their own people as well.

Those who are showing deep concern and interest in the development of the State of Israel recognize that Israel's contribution to the world must not be limited to the realm of science, technical development, and industry alone. There exists no shortage of this in the world. What the world expects of Israel is not additional scientists, but the rise of a generation who shall give expression to mankind's eternal values, namely the development of Israel's great religious and spiritual heritage. In this mad race for scientific development of the type that would create weapons of destruction, our leaders in governments and education are sadly overlooking the humanities. Israel should not seek to compete in this field to live up to its history and destiny. Israel must become the country wherein the voice of Israel's prophets must be heard from once again.

It is to this end that Bar-Ilan University is dedicated. The Canadian Jewish community may well pride itself on its share in the establishment and development of this great seat of learning in the Holy Land. A new era for the development of the Jewish spirit was begun five years ago, with the continued understanding help of those who see Israel becoming once again a light unto the nations. Bar-Ilan University will play its role in bringing this about.

MONTREAL MARRIAGES

SCHWARTZ-BRASGOLD

The marriage of Miss Florence Ann Brasgold, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Brasgold, 8196 Wiseman Avenue, to Bernard Hyman Schwartz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Schwartz, 1890 Lajoie Avenue, took place at Chevra Kadisha-Bnai Jacob Synagogue, on Tuesday, November 17, at half-past six o'clock. Dr. Chaim N. Denburg, Rabbi, officiated, assisted by Rabbi David Roth, Cantor J. Rosensweig, and Reverend A. Greenberg. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was gowned in white peau de soie, made with a fitted bodice; scooped neckline embroidered with lace encrusted with seed-pearl-beads; long sleeves; full bouffant skirt, with appliques of the lace-finishing in a long chapel train, caught by a large bow at the waist. Her shoulder-length veil of tulle illusion was arranged with a crown of the lace; and she carried a cascade of orchids and stephanotis. Mrs. Frank Freedman, sister of the bride, was matron of honour. She wore a gown of pink peau de soie, made with an off-the-shoulder bodice, embroidered with seed-pearl-beads and sequins; and full bouffant skirt, short in front, draped longer in the back, and held by a bow at the waist. Her pink bow headdress had ribbons at the back; and she carried a cascade of sprayed pink camellias. Miss Arlene Schwartz, sister of the groom, was maid of honour, in a gown of pink organza and tulle, made with a square neckline and full bouffant, embroidered skirt. She had a jewelled tiara; and carried a cascade of miniature pink roses and white pom-poms. Morris Brasgold, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Frank Freedman, Ronald Tunis, Charles Wintor, Peter Mazer, Harry Rubin, and Steven Kisber. Barry Brasgold, brother of the bride; and Earle Wiseman, were junior ushers. Standards, bouquets, and baskets of pink and white carnations, and pom-poms, with greenery, decorated the Synagogue and hall. An orchestra played. Mrs. Brasgold, mother of the bride, was gowned in blue brocade and peau de soie, with an overskirt of matching, brocaded appliques; with a hat to match; and carried a clutch bag adorned with white orchids. Mrs. Schwartz, mother of the groom, was gowned in blue peau de soie, made with a criss-cross neckline, and full skirt; with a flowered hat; and a nosegay of pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Hyman Schwartz spent their wedding trip in Bermuda, and New York, the bride travelling in a two-piece black and beige-brown boucle suit; with a three-quarter-length coat trimmed with a black Persian lamb collar. They have taken up residence at 775 Caliza-Lavallee, in Quebec City. Here for the marriage were: Mrs. D. She was gowned in white Duchess satin and embroidered Alencon lace trimmed with seed-pearl-beads and sequins, and styled with a portrait neckline outlined in lace; short sleeves; and bouffant skirt with draped panels and falling into a chapel train. An Elizabethan crown held her bouffant veil of tulle illusion; and she carried a bouquet of white stephanotis and orchids. Miss Linda Klein was maid of honour for her sister, wearing a gown of bouton d'or silk organza cut with a draped skirt; and a head-piece of match-in tulle illusion. She carried a bouquet of yellow and white roses. Dr. Marvin Clamen was best man for his brother. Columbia University School of Goldman Band concerts each summer in New York's Central Park.

A director and member of the executive committee of the American Smelting and Refining Company, Colonel Guggenheim also was vice-president of the United States Zinc Company. The Guggenheim name is one of the best known in American industry and philanthropy. Colonel Guggenheim's grandfather, Meyer, founded the mining dynasty that his seven sons helped to develop in North and South America.

One of the brothers, Benjamin, perished in the sinking of the Titanic. When the oldest, Solomon, senior member of their firm, Guggenheim Brothers, died in 1949, Colonel Guggenheim became head of the family. Solomon Guggenheim set up the foundation that bears his name to encourage and popularize art, especially modern art. Another son, Simon, was a United States Senator from Colorado.

Colonel Guggenheim's father, Daniel, had been an active patron of aviation. He established the Fund for the Promotion of Aeronautics and the Guggenheim School of Aeronautics at New York University, says the New York Times. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim in 1942 presented her 182-acre Long Island estate to the Institute of the Aeronautical Sciences to become an aeronautical research center in his memory.

Colonel Guggenheim and his wife, Polly, the former Rebecca Pollard Van Lennep, were one of the best-known couples in Washington. They entertained frequently at their Tudor mansion, Firenze, on Broad Branch Road overlooking Rock Creek Park. Mrs. Guggenheim is a heart patient at the Washington Hospital Center. Also surviving is a son, M. Robert Guggenheim, Jr., of Los Angeles.

CANADA "JUST CANNOT AFFORD" ANOTHER ROUND OF INFLATION — SAYS B OF M PRESIDENT

G. ARNOLD HART SAYS "TIGHT MONEY" HAS HELPED HOLD BACK INFLATION

R. D. MULHOLLAND, GENERAL MANAGER, REPORTS LOANS INCREASED 25 PER CENT TO $1-3/4 BILLION; PAID-UP CAPITAL AT NEW HIGH

As a trading nation in an increasingly competitive world, Canada simply cannot afford another bout of inflation, according to G. Arnold Hart, president of the Bank of Montreal.

Mr. Hart told shareholders of the B of M at their 142nd annual meeting in Montreal, that tight money has been necessary to stem inflation and that by putting up with the disciplines of monetary restrictions, the nation has laid a foundation for orderly, stable and enduring economic progress in the future.

Shareholders also heard R. D. Mulholland, the bank's general manager, present a statement reflecting an unprecedented demand for credit, with B of M loans rising more than 25 per cent during the year to an all-time high of $1,773 million; while net profits amounted to $12,191,060.

Nevertheless, a strong liquid position was maintained and the bank's capital structure was enlarged so that its paid-up capital is now the largest of any Canadian bank.

Steady Recovery

Reviewing the past year, Mr. Hart said economic recovery which started slowly in 1958 has steadily gathered strength, and the gross national product for 1959 may reach $35 billion. It has been "a real recovery, little inflated by price increases," while "shortages of goods, manpower and productive capacity are neither present nor in prospect," he summarized.

"Tight Money" Banking

While the central bank has operated, since October, 1958, to keep the money supply steady, the business recovery has brought increased demands for bank credit, Mr. Hart said, pointing out that the banks responded by increasing their Canadian loans of all kinds by some $1,300 million — with B of M loans in Canada rising by more than $300 million — in the 12 months ended October, 1959.

"With the money supply being held level," Mr. Hart continued, "the chartered banks could let their loans rise only if they were willing and able to dispose of other assets in an approximately equivalent amount. In practical terms, this has meant for all banks the sale of large blocks of government securities, for most of the year in an unreceptive market, at progressively lower prices and hence at a rising rate of capital loss."

Borrowers' Problems

"I know of no magic wand that will enable us, in a time of monetary scarcity, to meet all the requests made for loan accommodation, however desirable and creditworthy," Mr. Hart said. "What we endeavor to do at all times is to allocate our lending resources as equitably and as intelligently as possible, having due regard to all the circumstances involved," he continued.

General Manager's Address

R. D. Mulholland, general manager of the B of M, presenting the bank's 142nd annual statement, reported that in a year of "restrictive monetary environment," net profits were increased 17.7 per cent, to $12,191,060, after setting aside $12,642,000 for income taxes. Of this record profit, $10,684,730 was provided for shareholders' dividends equivalent to $1.85 per share.

Following a "rights" offering of 675,000 new shares of capital stock — which saw 99.2 per cent of the rights being exercised — B of M paid-up capital stood at $60,649,513, and completion of the stock issue will result in a paid-up capital of $60,750,000 and a rest account of $139,850,000, Mr. Mulholland said.

Loans Up 25 Per Cent

Total loans of $1,773 million were the highest in the bank's history — up more than 25 per cent over the 1958 total, with NHA mortgage loans showing the largest increase of all categories — up 32.5 per cent, or $56 million, to $227 million.

Even so, the general manager went on, the bank could not meet all the demands for loans made upon it, although it had been "particularly mindful of the needs of the small businessman and the small personal borrower."

To meet the unprecedented demand for credit of all kinds, the bank reduced its investment portfolio 27.9 per cent to $886 million, compared with the previous year's holdings of $1,230 million.

Deposits showed little change at $2,998 million, compared with $3,038 million a year ago, and the same was true of total B of M assets, which stood at $3,289 million, versus 3,277 million in 1958. "Quick" assets were reported at $1,579 million, or 51.6 per cent of all liabilities to the public, compared with 52.1 per cent a year earlier.

The Destiny Of Israel

BY RABBI S. M. ZAMBROWSKY, OF MONTREAL, NATIONAL CHAIRMAN OF THE MIZRACHI-HAPOEL HAMIZRACHI ORGANIZATION

Among the commendable traits the Jewish people always possessed, was the ability not to be affected by rapid changes to which it was subjected. When confronted with upheavals causing a feeling of insecurity, restlessness, and tensions, the Jew always displayed the inner strength and moral stamina to resist. He never yielded to the various vicissitudes. Instead, he clung with greater determination and fortitude to his own way of life, and concentrated more stubbornly upon its greater development. He somehow intuitively sensed that at such times it was more important to adhere with determination to that which is timeless, rather than to become absorbed into that which was timely. He knew that in a long run, that which appears timely disappears, and the timeless endures through all changes.

Therefore, whenever events moved swiftly by him, whether political, economic, or revolutionary, he felt that it was in his better interest not to yield, but resist. And to press even harder for the development of his own spiritual values. That trait stood the Jew in good stead. It was one of the factors responsible for his survival and national rebirth.

One of the more disturbing phases in Jewish life today, is our inability to rise above such changes. We have instead developed an inclination to become "practical". We are no longer sold on the notion of giving first priority to the things that endure all changes, to the things that are eternal to the things of spirit. And yet, if our religion and our history have taught us anything, it is the lesson not to deviate from our heritage, our eternal truth, regardless of the storms and timely pressure. It was our adherence to this lesson that enabled us not only to hold our own, but to make the type of contribution to the world that was most significant.

The greatest danger to us today, would be to follow the present world trend when even the great nations live on a day-to-day basis, from hand to mouth, in constant fear and tension, instead of planning for a world that is sound and sane. The shape of things in the world today is surely imposing upon us obligations of tremendous magnitude that will continue to weigh upon us heavily. Recent developments in North Africa and other places will necessitate the immediate transfer of entire Jewish communities.

Israel will face again a wave of immigration. The physical, economic, and security load of Israel will be most taxing. And yet, even as we shall be called upon to engage in such large scale operations, we dare not lose sight of our equally important task of nation building. The moulding of the future and destiny of our people must be done simultaneously, if we are to accomplish our ultimate aim.

American Jewry's observance of three hundred years of Jewish settlement recall to our mind certain basic errors that were made there. Their approach was: let us become established economically on a sound basis, and then we shall concentrate on our spiritual religious and cultural needs. That error cost us several generations of Jewish life. We could not afford it. Then, we had, of course, a rich reservoir of Jewish life in Europe. It is no more today. We dare not repeat this mistake in Israel today. We cannot afford it. The spiritual and cultural life of a people can never be caught up, once neglected, without leaving its imprints. It must be developed simultaneously.

Our emphasis on the spiritual and cultural life does not represent concern for the spiritual alone. It is a concern for the welfare of the country as a whole, that its foundation be solid, for the physical can no longer be separated from the spiritual. They are indivisible. The main cause of the world's upheaval today, its stress and strain, its lack of peace, is due essentially to mankind's failure to recognize this very truth. What brings on wars, if not the denial of things that are moral and spiritual, the refusal to accept the moral responsibility that the human has for each other!

When we experience two world wars in one generation and constantly live in fear of a third one, it is time to take stock of our affairs. We may not be powerful enough today to influence the trend in the world, but, while building our own world, we must not be guilty of the same transgressions that bring about such calamities. Breaking away from our heritage, ignoring our traditions, would be adding to the existing confusion and sharing the guilt for the restlessness prevailing in the world. This is why it becomes so imperative to make sure that our own life, in our reborn State of Israel is built on solid foundations. Solid foundations mean that equal emphasis be placed at the very outset on our cultural and religious development as well. It should hardly be necessary to belabour this point.

This is why we must take exception to the well meaning but nevertheless erroneous approach of those who would defer the spiritual needs of Israel to a later date, to a time when Israel's economy will be established and the heavy burden of caring for its security will have been achieved. But this is our very point of concern, the country's security. Israel cannot be made secure unless it is morally and spiritually strong.

We now face the atomic age. It could be a blessing. So far it is more of a curse. It has thrown mankind into dreadful fear. Why? Is there anything sinister in the development of atomic energy? Of course not! It is because mankind is not morally and spiritually equipped to convert the atom into a blessing for its welfare. The greater the advances in the field of science, the stronger must become the spiritual ties. Therein lies our salvation. There, indeed, lies the salvation of the world. Without it only disaster can result.

What a feeling of relief and exultation it is, therefore, to know that today amidst all these tensions, confusion, and transition, there still exists a group of Jews who, like their forefathers, are able to rise above present day tendencies, and who quietly and patiently are dedicated to strengthening the strongholds of Jewish life and Jewish survival, who, while giving their all to the physical upbuilding of the State of Israel, nevertheless, do not lose sight of Israel's real strength and security and, in these days of turmoil have the vision and wisdom to build simultaneously the type of an institution that will assure strength and glory to Israel.

Bar-Ilan University, while advancing scientific progress, will be forging the religious spirit of our prophets. Bar-Ilan University will give spiritual substance to the atom and thus transform it into a blessing. Bar-Ilan University will bring the healing word to the harassed soul of mankind. Bar-Ilan University will give the kind of knowledge, instruction, and practical guidance that will gladden the heart of man, with faith in God and justice. Bar-Ilan University will cultivate our marvelous cultural and spiritual legacy and will disseminate our eternal teachings to a world that is sorely in need of it today more than ever before. Building our State on such foundations, it is bound to triumph.

What was a dream five years ago when Bar-Ilan University opened its doors to the first group of students, has become a reality. At the close of the last semester, the first class of graduates received their B.A. and B.Sc. degrees. In these five years of its existence Bar-Ilan University has received universal acclaim for its unique contribution to the cultural and spiritual development of the State of Israel.

Bar-Ilan University's contribution, however, is not limited to the State of Israel. Students from Canada, the United States, and a number of European and South American countries have been receiving their studies there, and upon returning to their respective communities are prepared to give the type of intelligent Jewish leadership that the Jewish community requires. Thus a cultural and spiritual link is being formed between Israel and the Diaspora.

The founders of Bar-Ilan University had yet another vision, whose realization is now within sight. Judaism never saw a conflict between religion and science. In fact we always took pride that our religious scholars were great men of science. The leadership of Bar-Ilan University therefore visualized the day when doctors, jurists, engineers, chemists, men of letters and arts would
